The Secretary General said the upcoming Summit would be "historic and transformative", including with decisions on strong support for Ukraine over the short and longer terms. He also underlined that Allies will agree "a major strengthening of our posture", which will require "more robust and combat-ready forward presence, even higher readiness, and more pre-positioned equipment and supplies", and welcomed that more and more Allies are moving to spend at least 2 percent of GDP on defence. On the Strategic Concept to be agreed in Madrid, Mr Stoltenberg said the document will "assess our changed security environment, and reaffirm our fundamental values and tasks; it will be a blueprint for the Alliance's future." Leaders also discussed Finland and Sweden's historic applications to join NATO. "I welcome the serious steps already taken to address Türkiye's concerns," said the Secretary General, adding: "our dialogue continues, to find a united way forward". Source NATO
